

The Law Enforcement Officers Hip-Pocket Guide to Testifying in Court

More convictions are lost at trial by bad police testimony than by bad police procedure. -- The LEOs Hip-Pocket Guide. This little book should be standard issue and required reading for all police officers. - Sgt. Don Press Preston, EOPD (ret'd.) Read it twice. Larry Holtz, Esq. (Holtz Learning Centers - police training) An officer who thinks (s)he can safely trade punches with a good lawyer in court is like the lawyer who thinks she has the upper hand when an officer pulls her over for Drunk Driving. - The LEOs Hip-Pocket Guide. Defense attorneys know that police officers are often ineffective witnesses. All too frequently, law enforcement officers, private investigators and security agents fail to capitalize on their good police work, and lawbreakers go unpunished. This is sad. Author Marc Garfinkle is Adjunct Professor of Persuasion and Advocacy at Seton Hall Law School. He is also a defense lawyer and a former private investigator. He understands and exploits the areas where law enforcement testimony is deficient. Defense lawyers have known these matters for years. Now Marc Garfinkle tells police witnesses what they need to know about testifying in court. Pocket-sized because, as the author says, Police generally don't read a lot, but they don't mind carrying their tools, this handy handbook fits neatly into a pocket for review while riding the bus or waiting in court. Officers at every level of training and experience are sure to pick up some valuable pointers that are keepers. Learn from an expert: How to prepare for trial How to enhance your credibility How to work better with the prosecutor How to handle inconsistencies in testimony How to testify as a target or defendant How to persuade judges and juries. A terrific course supplement to a Criminal Justice curriculum, The Law Enforcement Officers Hip-Pocket Guide to Testifying in Court, is a must-read for every law enforcement officer who goes to court. Available in quantity at deep discounts for PBA fundraisers, through the CreateSpace Store.
