

Midnight in the Guest Room

In Midnight in the Guest Room Jan Bailey locates the bliss of the routine experiences in women's lives: childhood, love, marriage, sexuality, birth, child rearing, aging and transforms them into moments of transcendent power and beauty. With uncommon wit and sensitivity she offers us poems about the pleasures of a woman's soft and unstylish belly; the fierceness of mother love; the desolation of a miscarriage; the hilarious illusion of sexual healing; the unexpected eroticism of breast feeding: from Mornings in the Blue House: She draped her newborn like a sheaf of peonies across her lap, peeled back the blanket from the puffball face, then parted her robe, pinched her nipple and settled in her daughter there and something sweetly sexual rose between them: the pressure, the release and she fell fully into love, holding nothing back as with a man, whose wounding begins as soon as he cries Baby and rolls over. Rooted in the landscape of the South, celebrating the private treasures to be found in the everyday world, her poems speak to us all of the joys and the losses of the seasons of our lives. Jan Bailey grew up in the foothills of South Carolina. The author of two highly regarded volumes of poetry, Paper Clothes and Heart of the Other, she is a recipient of the South Carolina Arts Commission Fellowship in Poetry. She holds an MFA from Vermont College and divides her time between South Carolina, where she is chair of the creative writing department of the Governors School for the Arts and Humanities, and Monhegan Island, Maine, where she teaches poetry workshops and operates the island general store.

for protection from the elements and to ensure colors will stay bright throughout the seasons. Birds love gourds for nesting and will often return to the same one year after year. When nesting season ends, the gourd's usefulness doesn't end. Birds will continue to use them as shelter from weather and for protection from predators.
