

Reflections of an Octogenarian

Betty Brown Hayes (the author), a native of Massachusetts, has lived in Manhattan for 60 years. In addition to raising two children and putting them through college, she has had several careers: 39 years on Wall Street as a professional, 14 years as the administrator of a local non-profit historical society, 1 1/2 years as a writer for a non-profit rating service for charities, and a year as administrator of her college alumnae club in NYC. This was during the time that stay-at-home moms were the norm. She has dealt with heavy problems such as domestic violence, mental illness and suicide in the family. The book was written episodically, and with a light touch, if that is possible in dealing with tough issues. Each chapter is a separate essay, and discrete from the others, and they need not be read in order (for continuity of plot.) Happy reading!
