

Filming Forster: The Challenges of Adapting E.M. Forsters Novels for the Screen

Filming Forster focuses upon the challenges of producing film adaptations of five of E. M. Forsters novels. Rather than follow the older comparative approach, which typically damned the film for not being faithful to the novel, this project explores the interactive relationship between film and novel. That relationship is implicit in the title Filming Forster, rather than Forster Filmed, which would suggest a completed process. A film adaptation forever changes the novel from which it was adapted, just as a return to the novel changes the viewers perceptions of the film. Adapting Forsters novels for the screen was postponed until well after the authors death in 1970 because the trustees of the authors estate fulfilled his wish that his work not be filmed. Following the appearance of David Leans film A Passage to India in 1984, four other film adaptations were released within seven years. Perhaps the most important was the Merchant Ivory production of Maurice, based upon Forsters gay novel, published a year after his death. That film was among the first to approach same-sex relationships between men in a serious, respectful, and generally optimistic manner.

No stencils or patterns are ever used. Every birdhouse is treated with several coats of high quality exterior varnish for protection from the elements and to ensure colors will stay bright throughout the seasons. Birds love gourds for nesting and will often return to the same one year after year. When nesting season ends, the gourd's usefulness doesn't end. Birds will continue to use them as shelter from weather and for protection from predators.
