This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1896 Excerpt: ...it was closely adherent to the pelvic wall and to the vermiform appendix, which overhung it on the right, whilst in front and also adherent was the Fallopian tube. The contents of the cyst were viscid and dark brown. The left ovary was also slightly enlarged and cystic, and this, with omentum thickened by chronic local inflammation and some matted coils of intestine, filled up the left half of the pelvis, forming the second mass felt during life. The apices of both upper lobes of the lungs were puckered and scarred, being the sites of obsolete tubercle. The pericardium was healthy, and the heart of normal size. Firm, partially decolourised elot occupied the pulmonary artery and its branches, extending into their subdivisions; the aortic valves were competent, but the mitral leaked, and a row of small warty growths were found on the auricular aspect of the latter valve; there was also a small recent growth on one of the aortic curtains. Although there was nothing in the clinical history or appearance of the lower extremities to suggest thrombosis, yet on dissection the left profunda femoris vein was found blocked by a thrombus which projected into the lumen of the common femoral vein, and by detachment of a part of which the pulmonary thrombosis was in all probability occasioned. VI. DISEASES OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM. CEREBELLAR ABSCESS; EVACUATION; RECOVERY. A. J-- , ait. 15, admitted May 10th, discharged July 26th, 1894. Measles when six years of age, followed by right otitis media; otorrhoea had continued ever since. Frontal headache and staggering five days before admission; vertigo, vomiting, nystagmus, and severe occipital headache one day later. On examination he was found to be thin, pale, drowsy, and evidently very ill. He lay curled upon the left side,...

No stencils or patterns are ever used. Every birdhouse is treated with several coats of high quality exterior varnish for protection from the elements and to ensure colors will stay bright throughout the seasons. Birds love gourds for nesting and will often return to the same one year after year. When nesting season ends, the gourd's usefulness doesn't end. Birds will continue to use them as shelter from weather and for protection from predators.
